The mineral zinc is important for testosterone production, and supplementing your diet for as little as six weeks has been shown to cause a marked improvement in testosterone among men with low levels.<sup>1</sup> Likewise, research has shown that restricting dietary sources of zinc leads to a significant decrease in testosterone, while zinc supplementation increases it<sup>2</sup> — and even protects men from exercised-induced reductions in testosterone levels.<sup>3</sup>

What is your thoughts on switching funds over for its under performance? While, overall, it is suggested to stay invested in the market through Mutual Fund route, is it necessary / recommended to compare funds and its returns and shift accordingly? The reason I am asking is, while some funds underform its benchmark for a particular period and then picks-up, retail investors who try to get the best fund performance all the time by chasing its returns will be confused – wouldn't they?
